

Tragic Heroines in Pursuit of Passion

Dancing with the gods- the making of a hero. -A true story of Irene Gleeson's heritage. With courage gleaned from corroboree grounds of outback Australia, to Balmoral beach Tea-dances; past the Trocadero ballroom with US marines, to Campsie dance-classes, -to Wiggles on Dee Why Beach and onto funeral dirges in the shadow of the Sudan Mountains; -Irene Gleeson daily faces death as she rescues 1000s of African orphans from rebels and witchcraft. What genes did she inherit from her Aboriginal great-grandmother, her mixed race grandmother, her half Irish mother and Swede American father that gave Irene the empathy and the tenacity for this role? What spiritual influences pervaded the heavenlies causing good and evil in the successive generations? This autobiography traces six generations of Australian women searching for love in all the wrong places. In May 2010 Irene Gleeson received the medal for the Officer of the Order of Australia for service to international relations, particularly through sustained aid for children affected by war and HIV/AIDS in north Uganda. She started the organisation CHILDCARE Kitgum Servants providing humanitarian work for 20 years with African orphans and continues to live in Kitgum Uganda Africa. The writing style is raw, real, and colloquial. The book is a fast paced drama which covers all the gamut of human emotion and is a saga covering from the 1860s to 2000s. The historicity of this book and its incidental detailed social customs adds to its significance. A spiritual dialogue between devils demons and God occur in significant stages of the various lives adding another dimension to this saga.
